

VT AJ Bell Income & Growth Q4 2023 Report

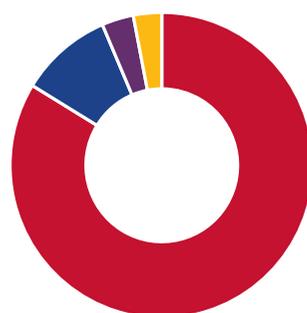

Commentary

A broad rally in global stock markets ensued in the final quarter. Optimism was sparked by hopes that lower inflation meant Central Banks would be able to cut interest rates in 2024 to ease economic conditions.

The return distribution in stock markets was slightly more favourable for income-focused strategies than the first three quarters of the year, in that the so called 'magnificent seven' shares in the US didn't dominate the market return. The Energy sector, however, provided a headwind as it followed the oil price lower. This was particularly impactful for the UK stock market exposure within the fund. Within Emerging markets, China declined, in sharp contrast to much of the global stock market. But some of the allocation to Emerging stock markets was shielded from this thanks to its larger exposure to better-performing markets such as India and Taiwan.

The performance of the fund picked up in the final quarter, returning 5.1% and making for a 7.7% overall return for 2023.
